

Because and So

Because is used to show the reason for an action

- I went to America because I wanted to study English.
- Because I wanted to study English, I went to America.
- I ate a hamburger because I was hungry.
- Because I was hungry, I ate a hamburger.

So is used to show the result of, or response to, an action

- I didn't sleep well last night, so I am very tired today.
- I ate a hamburger, so now I am full.

Use because or so in the following sentences

1. The beach was rocky, _____ we went to another one.
2. The pizza was too spicy _____ we added too much pepper.
3. The café was very noisy _____ there was a musician playing.
4. The night sky was starry _____ there were no clouds.
5. I haven't washed my car in a month, _____ it is very dirty.
6. It's rainy and I forgot my umbrella, _____ I am wet.
7. We can't see the sunset today _____ it is too cloudy.
8. The bar we went to was too smoky, _____ we went to a different one.
9. His car is shiny _____ it is only one week old.
10. I didn't comb my hair this morning, _____ it is still messy.

Complete the following sentences

1. I felt hungry, so _____.
2. I felt hungry because _____.
3. I am very sleepy today, so _____.
4. I am very sleepy today because _____.
5. My house was messy, so _____.